NFAW celebrates new partnership with Minderoo Foundation

The National Foundation for Australian Women (NFAW) is thrilled to announce a three-year partnership with Minderoo Foundation, an exciting investment in a stronger, more connected movement for gender equality in Australia.

The partnership marks an important new chapter for NFAW. It recognises more than 35 years of independent policy leadership and gives us the opportunity to expand our reach, bring more people together and turn evidence into lasting change in Australia.

Over the next three years, the partnership will help us to:

- strengthen our policy influence and government accountability work, including through our annual Gender Lens on the Budget report
- build stronger links across the women's movement, support emerging organisations and help develop the next generation of feminist leaders
- reach more people through digital content, media and new ways of sharing independent gender equality analysis
- grow our fundraising capacity while remaining independent and grounded in volunteer expertise.

NFAW Chair Sally Moyle said:

"We are excited to begin this new partnership with the Minderoo Foundation. Their support is a powerful vote of confidence in NFAW and in the importance of a strong, independent voice for gender equality.

"It gives us an extraordinary opportunity to build on our work, deepen connections across the women's movement and turn expert analysis into practical change."

NFAW is an independent, volunteer-led organisation that has worked to improve the lives of Australian women since 1989. Its network brings together expertise from government, academia and civil society.

Jacqueline Joudo Larsen, Executive Director for Gender Equality, Minderoo Foundation said:

"Achieving gender equality requires strong, independent organisations that can bring evidence, lived experience and diverse voices together to shape better policy and hold decision-makers to account. The National Foundation for Australian Women has played that role for more than three decades, and Minderoo is proud to support the next chapter of its work.

"This partnership reflects our shared belief that lasting change happens when we invest in the organisations and leaders driving systemic reform. Together, we hope to amplify evidence-based advocacy and help create a more equitable future for women and girls across Australia."
